CONGRESS NEEDS TO WORK IN A BIPARTISAN MANNER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman very much; and I appreciate my good friend, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), insisting that we have a balanced budget.

Might I remind him that as we speak, the Committee on Rules is meeting and having the opportunity to review the $82 billion tax proposal of the Republicans of this House, when all that we ask for and all that is necessary is that we take the Senate bill that has just been passed to fix the major error that occurred last week when this body, this Republican House and Republican Senate, refused to provide a child tax credit for working families making $10,000 to $26,000 a year.

The Senate fixed it last week. The bill from the Senate is right here at the desk. All this House needed to do was to adopt the Senate language. It would immediately go to the President's desk. It would be immediately signed by the President, and now 19 million children would be able to have the same child tax credit refund that the rich have been able to get by the President's tax bill. But lo and behold, the very same party that has stood up and indicated that they are willing to fight the deficit, they have now before us an $82 billion jump of a tax cut that has all of the kitchen sink in it, and they want to keep the children of America from getting their tax cut.

I hope we can work on this issue in a bipartisan manner, Mr. Speaker. I hope the Committee on Rules right now will reject the proposal by the Committee on Ways and Means, the Republican Committee on Ways and Means. This potpourri of taxes that eliminates the opportunity for us to move quickly to the President's desk with a clean, stand-alone tax cut that provides a refund to the children of America, a simple $154 that we can give to 19 million children and their families and those that make $10,000 to $26,000 a year. I hope we can do that.

Mr. Speaker, I want to finish on this very important concern that I have, and that is that over the weekend we heard a lot of scrambling on the Sunday morning talk shows about a call for congressional investigations about the question of the existence of weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know if there are weapons of mass destruction. And I am not intending to be in an argument with my administration on the question of their veracity. But I do want to be in an argument on behalf of the American people. They need to know the truth. So I am calling for an independent investigation, a special prosecutor, or a special commission to investigate what was known by the administration and what level of intelligence was given when we made the decision to go to war with Iraq. What kind of intelligence and documentation of the intelligence that would have given the necessary impetus or basis of going to war, what was known by the intelligence community, what facts did they give about the weapons of mass destruction, why was a decision made to go to war with respect to the intelligence given when we know that the U.N. inspectors were doing the very same thing?

The argument that the administration made is that we know there are weapons of mass destruction, we know that they are there, and the U.N. inspectors are not doing their job and they are not doing it fast enough. Two months later after the official part of the war has ended, although we are still at war, we do not have the weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Speaker, this is a constitutional question of war and peace. We were supposed to declare war under article I of the Constitution. We did not do that. Members of this House were moved to tears when they made the decision to vote on the question of going to war. What a tragedy if we did not have the sufficient intelligence or the accurate intelligence or the intelligence community did not truthfully give the facts necessary to make an intelligent decision that sent young men and women off to their deaths.

I believe we owe the American people the truth. The Congress is not going to do it. I understand there is a complete collapse in the other body with respect to bipartisan hearings on the question of what kind of intelligence was given to make the decision. Then forget about it. Give the American people the truth. We need to have an independent investigation, an outside commission, and/or a special prosecutor, which I am calling for and will make an official demand for it in the following days to come.

I hope that we realize that truth to the American people is our obligation as members of this government. The American people must depend upon our veracity, and as well they must depend upon the right decisions being made on their behalf and on behalf of the young men and women in the United States military. We salute them for their willingness to offer the ultimate sacrifice, but I believe truly it is important for us to have the truth on this issue, and an independent investigation is well needed.

MEDICARE PROBLEM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I come to the House currently to discuss the Medicare issue, and this is a tough issue that is facing us. It is one whereby Members can choose a political route, or they can choose a route of policy.

The numbers that are presently in front of us cannot lie. These numbers are cold. They will not go away, and that is that we have this: the demographics, the baby boomers when they become seniors, there is a smaller population behind them, and the present Medicare model as we know it cannot exist unless we go to a 20 percent payroll tax.

There is a desire here within Congress to deliver a prescription drug benefit to Medicare. Well, if we just add prescription drugs to Medicare without addressing the long-term solvency, we have only exasperated the insolvency of Medicare as we know it.

Therein lies our challenge. So I believe if we just added a prescription drug benefit to Medicare without making this long-term solution to the solvency of Medicare, that is a very faulty approach.

Right now within the Republican Caucus there is a discussion about two approaches on how to do this. These are two completely different approaches.

The country has had an opportunity to see the approach sponsored by the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, because Congress has passed this measure two other times, and that is an insurance-based product, a defined benefit. We provide a cash assistance to beneficiaries to help them manage their drug bill and to make that assistance then targeted to those who need it.

We create this insurance pool for the purchase of drugs-only insurance which the Federal Government would then underwrite. These are two different approaches.

The first approach that I mentioned, really, is there are five of us that have come together and have drafted this approach. This insurance-based approach, though, really begins to concern us. It concerns us because there
